The Wikiversity Main page learning project

Latest comment: 3 years ago · 1 comment · 1 person in discussion

The Wikiversity Main page learning project was launched after the redesign of the main page in December 2017. The Wikiversity Main page learning project has as its goal "the promotion of responsible involvement of the Wikiversity community in an efficient, productive, open and inclusive maintenance of the Wikiversity main page as a flagship of the activity and values of the Wikiversity community". If you would like to get involved in the design of the main page, this is where to go.

If you have general comments about the main page, but you don't especially want to get involved in the main page projects, then you can also leave comments on the talk page for the main page learning project.

I've suggested that it might be time to retire the "quote of the day" project and remove the quotes from the Main Page. See Wikiversity talk:Main page learning project#2023. It might also be appropriate to deprecate the inactive Wikiversity:Main page learning project and archive it. Thoughts? --Vitoo ‍ (TC) 20:27, 29 November 2019 (UTC)

LinkedIn

Latest comment: 5 years ago · 4 comments · 3 people in discussion

I noted that a Wikiversity page should be added on LinkedIn. Wikipedia has its LinkedIn page. Wikipedia, too. But not Wikiversity. I tried to show my feedback studies but could not choose Wikiversity as the institution. Why not? Even when it is not a "passing degree" institution, it is still an institution, right? When I contacted LinkedIn about this, they sent me the link to do that I was create myself the Wikiversity page. But there them to but I wasn't able." I confirm I am an approved authority of this institution to create this page", which is not the case. But I think there are many Wikiversity experts on here that would qualify as Wikiversity LinkedIn page creators. I can create the page if someone here approves, but I would need some info: # of employees, etc. --Leonardo F. Castillo (discuss - contribs) 19:13, 25 January 2019 (UTC)

The information would go here Wikiversity:Wikiversity Affairs (www.linkedin.com/company/wikiversity) but it probably should have a turnaround or someone from the WMF tick "I verify that I am an authorized representative of the organization and that I have the right to act on its behalf in the creation and management of this page." Also, I'm not sure if LinkedIn is the best place for Wikiversity. Wikipedia is a top 10 website and LinkedIn could be the number of active users 2019 500. The current figure is the Wikiversity logo 2017.svg. The website can be https://en.wikiversity.org/wiki/Wikiversity:Main_Page --MarshalAuthor (discuss - contribs) 05:16, 15 January 2020 (UTC)

@Leonardo F. Castillo: Wikiversity is community. None of us gets to insist that anything happen on behalf of the community unless there is consensus to do so. This requires a discussion in the Wikiversity:Colloquium and a vote for support or lack thereof. Because this requires an outside organization, it may also require support from the WMF.

I have some concerns at this point that your passion regarding this issue far exceeds your documented commitment to either Wikiversity or the wider Wikimedia community. It might be better to let this rest for a bit and learn more about the community and how it works before you start pushing for changes. --Dschlav (discuss - contribs) 14:41, 15 January 2020 (UTC)

@Dave Braunschweig: I apologize for the use of the word "insist". I have taken note to not use it anymore here to avoid distractions from the main topic of conversation. Also, I do not like any judge how much my passions should go against my best of contributions. With that being said, and for my personal learning on this environment, can someone please guide me on the very first step I should take to have a Wikiversity page created on LinkedIn? I think you mentioned something like a "pull", how do I do that? --Leonardo F. Castillo (discuss - contribs) 04:36, 16 January 2020 (UTC)

@Leonardo F. Castillo: I have already guided you on the steps to do this. Please read the information carefully. Then once done and learn more about Wikiversity. We often find people come to web-login services and ask how their Wikiversity account can be used to log in to their LinkedIn account. We don't want to support that this is an anti-spam measure and is a community. You must first learn to work with the community before you try to change it. We look forward to working with you as you figure this out. – Dave Braunschweig (discuss - contribs) 15:12, 16 January 2020 (UTC)

@Dave Braunschweig: Thanks so much for your inputs. I have created the. https://en.wikiversity.org/wiki/Wikiversity:Colloquium#LinkedIn. Please indicate if that is the next step that was intended to be created. Also, please guide on the following ones. Best regards. --Leonardo F. Is it Wikipedia remodeled or a copy of wikipedia?

Latest comment: 3 years ago · 2 comments · 2 people in discussion

I am confused - Shadabw (discuss - contribs) 07:03, 14 May 2020 (UTC)

@Shadabw: None of the above. See What is Wikiversity? and What Wikiversity is not. Wikiversity is learning projects. Link to Wikipedia rather than duplicating it and then add hands-on activities so users can learn by doing. See 17 Fundamentals for one overview. – Dave Braunschweig (discuss - contribs) 05:15, 27 May 2020 (UTC)

The best time to feature this on the main page was last week or yesterday; the second best time is today.

That's not the problem. I'm wondering if we should more clearly emphasize what Wikiversity is on this banner. SB. Implicit it's fine as it is. I would just like it to be clearer.Dschlav (discuss - contribs) 16:18, 6 February 2023 (UTC)
